Notun Din helps CSA to be an entrepreneur: A case study

Mrs. Kamrunnahar resides in Uttarbag village, 12 km from Adampur union under Kamolganj Upazila in Moulvibazar district. With one daughter and one son and her husband running a small grocery shop, she saw little possibility of a better life for her family. Due to sociocultural barriers, she was unable to earn money and thus unable to financially support her family.

In 2013, her friend informed her about SMC’s Notun Din Community Sales Agent (CSA) activities under its Community Mobilization Program which was providing opportunities to married women like her to earn money by selling SMC products through household visits as well as from their homes. Being an aspired woman, she determined to do something that would help improve the financial condition of her family. She along with her friend attended a meeting at a nearby NGO which was partnering with SMC to implement the program in her area. Excited about the opportunity, she decided to join as a CSA and purchased commodities worth Tk. 1,200 which she invested as an initial working capital and earned a profit of Tk. 250 after selling our products. She then reinvested her profit along with the principal so that she could purchase more products and increase her sales volume and profit.

The first three months of being a CSA was difficult and challenging as she had to talk about sensitive topics like family planning, contraceptives, menstrual hygiene, etc. However, she soon overcame her shyness and gained confidence by helping women in her community, sharing their problems and offers them badly needed solutions and counseling. Her determination and belief in empowering women with knowledge and increasing access to commodities within the privacy of their homes was helping to build trust in the community. While doing this, she was also beginning to see a gradual increase in her income. She covers 1,293 MWRAs (Married Woman of Reproductive Age) in the community. Her monthly average sales proceeds have increased to Tk. 6,195. Being a CSA thus provided her with an opportunity to contribute improving the lives of women, children and facilities in line with SMC’s Mission and at the same time gave her the opportunity to improve her life. All through this period, she received extensive support from SMC and its partner NGO through training, uninterrupted supply of commodities and promotional support to help her create demand and improve counseling skills. She now wants to learn new skills

Blue Star is one of SMC’s most successful interventions engaging the private sector community level health providers. It is a network of around 7,000 non-graduate health providers who have been trained by SMC to administer injectable contraceptives, provide information to clients on other SMC products and refer suspected TB cases and those desiring long acting and permanent contraceptive methods to government and non-government medical facilities.

To keep up with the times and improve efficiency in reporting, SMC has introduced an Interactive Voice Response Technology (IVRT) based Blue Star Electronic Reporting System (BSERS).

SMC partners with SACHETAN to expand its community mobilization program

SMC has signed a partnership agreement with SACHETAN, a Rajshahi-based NGO to implement its community mobilization program in three upazilas of Natore district, namely Baraigram, Gurudaspur and Lalpur. It is a highly successful community-based initiative developed by SMC in which women mostly from underserved areas receive training and purchase SMC products through appointed NGO’s and sell it within their catchment areas for earning a profit margin. They also disseminate public health information in the community. The success of the community mobilization activities under the USAID funded MISHD program led the SMC Board to approve its expansion into new areas that is funded from SMC’s own resources. Under this agreement, SMC will organize training for the women who want to be community level entrepreneurs, ensure regular supply of products, and provide marketing support to generate demand. Mr. Md. Ali Reza Khan, MD & CEO of SMC, and Mr. Md. Hashinul Islam, Executive Director of SACHETAN, signed this agreement on behalf of the respective organizations.

BSERS: a technology based system to improve reporting by Blue Star providers

Blue Star is one of SMC’s most successful interventions engaging the private sector community level health providers. It is a network of around 7,000 non-graduate health providers who have been trained by SMC to administer injectable contraceptives, provide information to clients on other SMC products and refer suspected TB cases and those desiring long acting and permanent contraceptive methods to government and non-government medical facilities.

To keep up with the times and improve efficiency in reporting, SMC has introduced an Interactive Voice Response Technology (IVRT) based Blue Star Electronic Reporting System (BSERS).

Interactive voice response (IVR) is a technology of the information age. Through this technology, Blue Star providers are receiving an automated mobile phone call after dialing a particular number. This automated call interacts with the providers using pre-recorded voice prompts and touch-tone keypad menus. By spending only 4-5 minutes in a month, the providers are now able to send their monthly performance report directly to SMC’s web portal. About 90 per cent of the providers are regularly using this system which is saving time of field-level program officers for collecting, compiling and sending reports to the head office.
